About Bambooga

Bambooga is a human puzzle game where players use color wristbands to bind their hands and feet to one another, leading to a sticky mess of people. The goal of the game is to crawl, walk, scoot or jump one's way towards the finish line, all the while maintaining the connections that are determined by a shake of the Bambooga Shaker. One of the factors that is most notable about Bambooga, is that the game is part of a social entrepreneurship project sponsored by Kids Ark Foundation of Thailand. A portion of the proceeds from the manufacturing of Bambooga will be used by Kids Ark to fund projects that support education and improve standards of living. Additionally, Bambooga is safe and eco-friendly, adhering to "green" manufacturing practices with second-generation cloth material and sustainable bamboo construction. Even the packaging is part of the game.

About Sandra Small

If ever one artist could sweep across the best of musical genres, plucking inspiration from all of the greats, she would be known as Sandra Small. Sandra was born in Naples, Italy born from an Italian mother and African American father. She carries a classic rock-funk-soul sound as deep and as wide as her varied experiences and is consistently compared to greats like Betty Wright, Erykah Badu, Lenny Kravitz, Prince and Sade.

Sandra is currently in the studio working on her next album scheduled for release in early next year. This album is a follow-up to the nine-song EP, "World Gone Crazy", released in 2006. Here Sandra sings about struggle, hope and freedom, but with a focus on "Rebirth". It is a story of soul searching and resolution, release and inspiration with genuine poetic lyricism.

Sandra has always been an artist who studies her craft. She remains hungry to continually learn more and more about the science of making musical masterpieces, exploring the incredible ranges of her talent. She plans to continue making great music and to establish herself as an international artist in the next decade, releasing at least three albums during that time. The band is currently in the studio weaving together the new album. Fans of true music are patiently waiting .
